After three years of working on the concept of a new academic journal, it is with pride that we at the Faculty of Economic and Financial Sciences at the University of Johannesburg present you with the first issue of the Journal of Economic and Financial Sciences (JEF).

In this inaugural issue, we are providing you with an assortment of relevant academic research articles ranging from the fields of economics and econometrics to the fields of accounting and project management.

This gives credence to our vision that the journal should serve as a vehicle for the dissemination of generalist research and knowledge, not just within a subject, but more broadly within a field of expertise.

In our quest for excellence and commitment to research quality, one has to understand the scope of the journal as we do believe that delving deeper into the rich diversity of manuscripts available within the fields of economic and financial sciences is the best way of pursuing our vision. We thus welcome manuscripts exploring a variety of subject areas and utilising an assortment of research paradigms and methodologies.

The editorial policy found at the end of this issue, provides contributors of manuscripts with a clear vision and understanding of what JEF is about!
